Your friendship, wisdom, unconditional love,
Taken away and we thought we could never laugh again.

Carousing the streets of Bangkok, careening across clear blue skies,
A shot of tequila, a Zappa track, a hand on a shoulder,
a laugh at the absurdity of life, an embrace,
Compassion in the most unexpected of times.

We now grasp desperately for words to explain a friendship that never needed them.

AND NOW,
WE WHO LOVED YOU MOST,
HAVE NOTHING BUT.

So we share them with each other, and all who will listen,
To tales of hilarity, awe, marvel, and wonder, and “you did what?”
How to live by The Code, to live like men should, to keep ’em guessing, to see, to taste, to hear, to love, to want it all and to deserve it all, and to know it.

TO LIVE LIKE CLIFF HELLER.

All we can give you in return is to let your fire
burn, burn like Jet-A and lust,
They are NOT mere words, but flames that heat the skin and the soul with tales that become legends

“I WAS THERE THE TIME....”
“I REMEMBER WHEN HE....”
“I MISS HIM BECAUSE....”

And all that you gave us, we pass around the fire.
To each other.

And we will not inspire a yawn or a commonplace thing, and because of you,
We know what Kerouac meant,
When he talked of being desirous of everything at the same time.

You would not have left us if you did not know that we would be okay. And now we wait for that to illuminate our darkness.

Know that you inspired us and left us similarly mad, in the mad and able arms of each other.

REST IN SLACK MY FRIEND.
YOU LEFT US WHAT WE NEEDED,
ALBEIT TOO SOON.
